CADIZ KILLING.

Desperate Pistol Duel Between
Two Dead Game Men,

Walter Brown Shot Dead and Officer Ed Sumner Wounded Twice.

A desperate pistol fight occurred at Cadiz Saturday night, which resulted in the killing of Walter D. Brown and the wounding of Ed. Sumner.

Sumner is a carpenter 52 years old who was acting as special policeman in the absence of the regular policeman, who was in Hopkinsville.

Brown had been drinking during the day and the men met at Brown's livery stable, Pomp Redd being the only witness.

There was bad blood between the men, as the result of a scandal of a few years ago involving Sumner's daughter.

Sumner undertook to arrest Brown for disorderly conduct and in a moment they were pouring hot lead into each other. Both men were dead game. It is said that Brown attempted to draw his pistol and Sumner opened fire. At the first shot Brown was shot through. He clapped his left hand to the wound and began getting out his pistol. He had to steady himself with his left hand against the door to shoot, leaving a bloody imprint of his hand on the door. Both men shot until their weapons were empty. Sumner fired with deadly aim, hitting five times out of six. Brown, though wounded to the death, hit Sumner twice, some say three times. His left arm was shattered and a bullet lodged in his leg. The desperate men then clinched in a death grapple, until Brown fell. He died in fifteen minutes.

Brown conducted a livery stable and was about 35 years old and unmarried. Sumner some years ago shot and killed a negro named Baker who was caught prowling around his house and ran when discovered.

Brown formerly lived in this city and his body was brought here yesterday for interment.

WOMAN THIS TIME.

Another Killing Reported From East of Town.

Becky McRae, col., Brained With an Axe by H. L. Nelson, a White Man.

Rebecca McRae, an old colored woman 65 years old, was killed with an axe at her home in Salubria Saturday afternoon, by a white man.

H. L. Nelson is in jail charged with the crime, but says he knows nothing about it.

Coroner Allensworth held an inquest Saturday night.

Richard Tandy testified that he saw a white man running with an axe in his hand going from where the woman was lying dead. He picked her up and carried her to her home.

Squire Holland said he saw a white man strike the woman with an axe. He was 200 yards away. The man was a tall, slim man with no hat on.

Etta Bronaugh said she saw a tall slim white man bareheaded pick up a rock and hit the fence near Becky McRae's house.

Bill McRae testified that his axe has been missing since shortly before the killing.

Paul Boyd testified that he saw Nelson after he was arrested. That he is tall and bald and that he saw the axe with blood on it.

The jury returned a verdict that Rebecca McRae came to her death by being struck on the head with some sharp instrument by some one unknown to the jury, but supposed to be Boyd (should be Lloyd) Nelson, a white man. One wound was about three inches long and another six inches long, both penetrating the cavity of the skull, the crime being wilful murder.

Z. T. Rawlins was foreman.

Nelson, the man under arrest, is not positively identified and the evidence adduced at the coroner's inquest is all that is known.

Nelson is about 32 years old and up to a month ago lived with his brother, C. B. Nelson, near Hargis' bridge; since that time he had been at work for Wm. Phipps, near Trenton.

It is also charged that the same man who killed the woman near the same place met Joe Tandy, an old negro man in the road, and stabbed him in the neck three times with a pocket knife, making serious but not fatal wounds.

Nelson's brother says he has been subject to spells at times and it is also said he was drinking Saturday. He was arrested near Pembroke Saturday afternoon soon after the killing, and brought to jail Sunday morning.

The woman killed was the wife of Wm. McRae. She was formerly a slave of the Lander family.

One Man Shot in the Leg With a Pistol Ball--A Dozen Shots Fired.

At a colored festival Saturday night, near Howell, Henry Campbell and Jesse Giles, two colored lotharios, fell out over a dusky damsel and exchanged shots until both had emptied their pistols. The fusillade sounded like a miniature battle, but after the smoke had cleared away it was found that none of the bullets had found lodgment in human flesh. The festival broke up in a general stampede.

At Spring Hill colored church, near Herndon, Sunday night the services were interrupted by a shooting between which Serry Coleman and Will Hall exchanged leaden compliments, with the result that Hall was shot in the calf of the leg. At least a dozen shots were fired, but only one took effect. Coleman has served a term in the penitentiary.

MEAL HOURS IN MEXICO.

Differences in Customs Noted by Visitors from the United States.

The Mexican breakfast, like that of the French, consists only of bread and coffee. Lunch, dinner, or supper, as they are called, differ but slightly. Dinner is served usually about two o'clock. It begins with soup and eggs, and then follows a number of meats: each served as a separate course, with an entire change of service every time. The meats are eaten quite alone, few vegetables being served in addition to the salad course, and such as are used for garnishment. The desert courses at a Mexican table differ even more radically from those served on American tables. Home-made pies, cakes and puddings are practically unknown.

The Mexican housewife comparatively little attention to the kitchen, and rarely cooks anything herself. If pastry is desired, it is purchased of the dulceria.

Nothing, says Modern Mexico, is baked in a Mexican house, even the bread being universally bought from bakers. Mexican cooks do not, as a rule, understand pastry making, and their sweets are limited to stewed fruits, usually cooked to the consistency of the richest and sweetest preserves, so that a very small portion is satisfying. Business hours in Mexico begin in the afternoon at 2:30 or 3 o'clock, and run until seven or eight o'clock, in the evening, so that the supper hour falls anywhere from 8:30 to an hour later. This is probably one reason that Mexicans are not more given to evening entertainments. Attendance upon the theater entails the necessity of an unusually early supper, or else its postponement until after the performance, a thing that often occurs. On the other hand, a leisurely supper of an hour or more, beginning at nine o'clock, brings the close pretty close to bedtime.

The Mexican day laborer swallows a bowl of coffee at a street stand, on his way to work, if he is fortunate enough to pass one, and has the rest of the staff of life among the lower classes, some rice and possibly some bits of meat are minced in a tortilla, which, in addition to serving often as both bread and meat, is also knife and fork and spoon. Bits are torn off, and by deftly curling it into circular form and doubling the end it is used as an effective spoon for even liquid food. A jug of pulque, the fermented juice of the maguey or century plant, that is the universal beverage among the masses on the tableland, is also a usual accompaniment of this meal.

The Mexican laborer does not have a midday rest, but works until about three o'clock, when the morning rest is repeated without variation as to length of time. He begins his toil at daybreak and is expected to work till dark, with little regard to a clock. On his way home he stops at a pulqueria to have all the drinks he can afford, and arrived at his home he may find something more to eat and he may not. It seems to make little difference to him. The Mexican peasant can eat more, or get along on less, than almost any other laborer on earth. In the southern part of the country, where the mountain Indians are at times drafted for work in the lower country, these men bring with them a ball of heavy corn meal paste, about the size of their heads, slung around their necks with a string. When hungry they break off a piece of this and mix it in a cupful of water, and upon this single ration they will subsist for an entire week.

THEY CALL HIM A FAILURE.

They call him a failure; he passes by in clothes that were thrashed one ago; his head drops forward that once was high.

His step is unsteady and slouching and slow. The stubbles look gray on his wrinkled face. His eyes are heavy where pride once shined.

He has stopped ahead and has quit the race. That once led him to glory and fame. He still is a hero of the olden time.

They call him a failure; but one still finds him singing and singing quite alone. She sits and she sews and she sometimes sings.

The words of brave songs that he used to know. Her face is fair and her eyes are bright. And still her heart on his lips is pressed.

With a shriveled heart in his sunken brow. They call him a failure; they do not know. That he still is majestic in his olden light. Though she tells him that he is foolish, she still is a hero of the olden time.

Dined Out with His Valet
Unusual Experience of a Titled Briton in New York

NOT every Englishman of title who makes a journey to this country has the privilege of dining out with a New York house. But that experience recently befell one titled Briton who came here for the first time.

He and his wife crossed on one of the great liners and for good reasons kept more or less to themselves. One cause for this was the fact that neither one of them was able to enjoy life at sea very much. It is not difficult to see that another reason might have been found in the usual desire to keep away from the majority of their fellow-men which seems to grow stronger as Englishmen of title leave their country behind them.

The traveler, who was destined to dine with his valet after he had landed on this free soil, saw very little of his fellow-passengers, therefore. With her ladyship he kept his deck stateroom and mingled little with the rest of the ship's guests. With one family he was acquainted before they had met on the landing stage at Liverpool. They were New Yorkers, and with an enthusiastic adoration for everything English which made this man little less than a terrestrial god in their opinion.

But if they loved a lord they were sufficiently acquainted with all the provisions of the book of snobbery to show their preference for the openly. So they knew enough to be only polite to his lordship and hold in check the exuberant hospitality that occurred to them whenever they caught a glimpse of him or his wife.

Smooth-faced and gray, severely dressed in subdued weeds and quiet and as reserved in manner as any of his fellow-passengers, he was a lord in his own right. He was a gentleman, and his wife was a lady.

His mere appearance was so impressive that nobody would have taken him for anything under the rank of a bishop—a somewhat youthful, worldly bishop, but certainly aristocratic. He seemed something like that to the American friends of his master. They made his acquaintance before the steamer had been out three days.

After 20 hours he was the devoted cavalier of the mother of the family, tucking her into her steamer chair with a care which she realized was born of long experience, walking her not too actively up and down the deck at night and looking after her comfort in many little ways that make life on a steamer comfortable for a middle-aged woman who has yielded to a struggle without a struggle. Her husband met the man on deck, recognized that he was English and presented him immediately to his family.

His attentions were generally most assiduous at night. But they were agreeable at all times. His manners seemed perfect to the group to which he had attached himself. He had learned in fact from some very famous masters just what manners should be.

The journey ended and the friends parted. The treatment of his lordship by the family from New York had been so much in accord with English instincts that he and his wife parted from them on the day the steamer sailed with great cordiality. They had been invited to dine with the New York family. Both of the foreigners realized that their own cordiality had prompted the invitation, so they accepted it.

It happened that the Americans possessed a family name which began with a letter well near the top of the alphabet. His lordship's initial was far below the other. So the Americans did not see the gray-haired Englishman bustling among his lordship's bags, opening them for the custom house inspectors, and keeping in charge his lady's maid. The English travelers came through the ordeal quickly, so far as their presence was required, and departed. The Englishman behind to superintend further inspection of the baggage.

It was in this position that his friends on the steamer found him after they had finished with the revenue officers and were walking toward their carriage. It was a most auspicious omen for him to be found in. Seated about him was the baggage of an Englishman of wealth, and that is always impressive. He took off his hat to the party. The matron stopped and the lady and daughter thanked her on either side.

"I won't say good-by," she began, "but I must go. I am going to dine with us on Tuesday. We are going to have some other English friends. So you must come."

The address and the card were handed over, and the valet, ignorant of the fortune in store for him, was thrust with a warm glow of emotion at his flattering introduction to America.

The night came. His master and mistress dressed and went out to dinner without indicating their destination. The other guests for the dinner were nearly ready when his master's valet parted. It needed only a few minutes' preparation for him to put the finishing touches to his attire and start from the hotel. He rode in a hansom along the same road through which his employers had taken their way, feeling very much abashed at the unusual position in which he found himself.

In the meantime the two other guests of the evening had arrived. In all, there were five guests at the dinner. Still missing after the two in whose honor the dinner was given had arrived. But they had not long to wait. In a few minutes the butler announced him and the valet entered.

The astonishment of the Englishman might be imagined. It would have been difficult to tell which of the two from wholly different causes was the more uncomfortable. The employer, when his seat suddenly turned toward him, stared as if he could not believe his eyes. The valet looked as if he had been caught with his hand in somebody's pocket.

But there was no time for a consideration of ways and means. Something had to be done on the instant, for the hostess had just turned to present the latest arrival.

"Don't you know one another?" she asked. "Why, we all crossed on the same steamer."

Then she said a few words of introduction and carried the valet on to sit with her group to be presented. "The emotions that passed through my mind," the master said later, in telling of his remarkable introduction to this country, "went through a remarkable range. I knew my valet to be an honest man. He was even introduced under his own name, that he had done was tremendous presumption. But I don't believe that he acted with the deliberate intention of deceiving. He had certainly intended the status of decision have done, to be taken for his master."

"I knew that to leave the house then or to order him to leave would make the situation intolerable for everybody. To let the facts be known then and there would embarrass the hostess hopelessly as well as the rest of the guests. The man was obviously in a funk, and if I had told him to go or showed him by my expression that such was my wish, he would have rushed away in a second. So I decided to acknowledge the introduction by a bow and my wife did the same. The man was led away immediately to be presented to the other guests."

"In the minute that my wife and I were together we decided to remain perfectly quiet on the subject. Luckily, the man was placed at a distance on the other side of the table. When the women left the room he excused himself on the ground of another engagement and hurried away. "When we got home that night to the hotel I found evidence of his services. I was not in the habit of seeing him under any circumstances until morning, and I awaited him with special interest the next day. It seemed to me that I should have to let him go. I was just starting on a long tour, and had no idea where I should get another man so good. If indeed I found one of any class, I should be sure to get him. I was not left for me to do but to tell him to go back to England, where he was at least free from the temptation of trying to go where he had no business."

"I have not had the opportunity of testing my fortitude in discharging him, for he never came back. A very respectable note was brought by one of the boys to the hotel. He told me that in view of what had occurred the night before he had decided to take passage on a steamer sailing that day for England. He said he had been up all night putting my affairs in readiness for his departure, and would send everything in good order. That was the last I ever heard from him, and I never saw him again—even at dinner."—N. Y. Sun.

AWFUL HEADACHE.

"That period of life known as the 'Change' is very trying to many women. It generally affects the health seriously. Often it affects the mind as well as the body. In some cases the suffering is very severe and prolonged, and life seems a burden instead of a blessing. There is no woman passing through the critical period of the change of life who will not receive help from the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. In almost every case it will cure the pains and suffering, and permanently re-establish the general health."

"When I commenced to take 'Favorite Prescription' I thought I would never live through the 'Change,'" writes Mrs. Charles E. Thompson, of Georgetown, Eldorado Co., Calif. "I suffered from the troubles one could have and live. I had stomach trouble; lived on dry bread and hot water for three months, not being able to keep any food on my stomach; had constipation and awful headache; was bloated at times in the bowels, had pain in the chest and hacking cough, but, thanks to Dr. Pierce, I am not troubled any more."

"Since last October I have traveled over land, rocky roads in farm wagons and felt no return of any of my old troubles, and I know that before using Dr. Pierce's medicines I could not have stood half of it, as the least jar would have caused aching from head to foot."

"As to the Common Sense Medical Adviser, I am very thankful for it. I would not be without your book if I had to pay five dollars for one of them. It is the best family doctor book I ever saw, and it would advise every lady who has not got one of your most reliable and useful books to send at once for one. I know that she would never regret sending for it."

Sick women, especially those suffering from diseases of long standing, are invited to consult Dr. Pierce, by letter, free. All correspondence is held as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

If you are led to the purchase of "Favorite Prescription" because of its remarkable cures of other women, do not accept a substitute which has none of these cures to its credit.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are easy and pleasant to take. A most effective laxative.

FOR JUDGE COURT OF APPEALS, JUDGE THOS. J. NUNN, OF HOPKINS COUNTY.FOR CONGRESS,
HON. A. O. STANLEY,
OF HENDERSON COUNTY.FOR JUSTICE OF THE PEACE 2TH
MAGISTERIAL DISTRICT, LEE B. KING.The goosebone predicts a very severe winter.There will be a total eclipse of the moon Thursday October 16 beginning about midnight.Col. W. F. Codd, Buffalo Bill, is very sick at Fort Meade, S. D., and a permanent breaking down in health is feared.Ellen Stewart, an old colored woman, died in Chicago last week aged 132 years. She was the oldest person in the United States.The situation in the Eastern coal strike has not changed since last week, except that J. P. Morgan is to try his hand at a settlement, said President Roosevelt and Gov.
Odell have failed.Elford Lunsford, aged 83, was stopped at Beverly, W. Va., in an attempt to elope with Margaret Branscomb, a child of 12 years of age. The old man says he will get marry her.It is about time for Gov. Beckham to bring out some opinions on the eligibility question. Dick Knott's is about the only one so far made public that overrules the constitution.A. B. Chinn was killed and his son Asa Chinn, Jr., wounded in a battle with burglars in the Chinn home at Lexington Saturday night.
Earl Whitney, of Nashville, aged 17, and Claude O'Brien, of Memphis, aged 18, are in jail with circumstantial evidence strong against them. Whitney has a bullet wound in his leg and the ball taken out fitted young Chinn's pistol. He tells conflicting stories about his wound. O. L. Sledge's pistol, stolen by burglars the same night, was taken from one of the boys under arrest.The rules of the Democracy of the State do not authorize the Chairman of the State Central Committee to call a State primary, but there is no party law which forbids that functionary to refrain from calling for either precinct or county mass conventions in order that the sense of the voters of the State may be ascertained in a State convention, as to the wisdom or unwisdom of holding a State primary.—Mayfield Mirror.This suggestion is practicable if not feasible, but a convention to amend the rules and provide a platform would not meet the greatest of objections to the State primary—the expense. If the same convention could provide about $50,000 to defray the expenses of the primary to be called under the amended rules, there would be no serious obstacles in the way of a primary, provided the candidates wanted to submit their claims to such a method of settlement.

An Ancient Foe

To health and happiness is Scrofula—as ugly as ever since time immemorial.
It causes blemishes in the neck, disfigures the skin, induces the dangerous membrane, wastes the muscles, weakens the bones, reduces the power of resistance to disease and the capacity for recovery, and develops into consumption."A bunch appeared on the left side of my neck. It caused great pain, was inflamed, and became a running sore. I went into a general decline. I was persuaded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and when I had taken six bottles my neck was healed, and I have never had any trouble of the kind since." Mrs. K. T. SEYMOUR, Troy, Ohio.Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pillswill rid you of it. Scurvy and pemphigus, as they have rid thousands.John Hendrick in opening his campaign for Governor laid great stress upon the ineligibility of Gov.
Beckham for re-election. "We can't see what the ineligibility of Gov.
Beckham has to do with the eligibility of John Hendrick, but on that point here is what the constitution says about the office of Governor:
"He shall be elected for a term of four years; he shall be ineligible for the succeeding four years,"— Breckinridge News.Section 5 of the constitution provides that under certain conditions a governor may be elected for less than four years, to stand in the place of a man who was ineligible.
It further provides that a governor elected one "term" shall be ineligible for the next. The ablest lawyers Kentucky has produced in this generation say that a part of a term is a term in the eyes of the law, because a governor's term or terms is limited to four years. The legal definition for "term" is "the time for which anything lasts."A governor's term may be four years or it may be less if it does not last four years. A term of court may be four weeks or it may be three weeks, if it starts a week late. A convict's term may be two years or it may be 20 months, if he gets credit for good time, or it may be twenty weeks if he happens to be a gambler and stands in with the governor and touches the right button. The court holds a short term, the convict serves a short term and the law makes no distinction between terms and parts of terms. Beckham is serving a term as governor now and is ineligible for another term. Have we made it plain enough?The Democratic committee of the judicial district composed of David C. McLean and Hancock counties has found it necessary to increase the assessments of candidates for the primary to be held Nov. 4. The two candidates for judge have been raised $150 each and the candidates for commonwealth's attorney $75, making the fee for judges $750 each and for attorneys $175. The total assessment is $1,975 for four counties, or about $30 to the precinct. The same rate for the whole State would make the cost of a State primary more than $60,000. Who said primary elections were not expensive?Simply for information, The Record would like to know if Editor Meacham, of the Hopkinsville Kentuckian, would oppose a plan to elect the officials of the Western Asylum by a primary?—Cadiz Record.The editor of the Kentuckian has never opposed a primary election for purposes permitted by the party law, provided the candidates asked for it and voluntarily assumed the expenses. But in the matter suggested, why not resort to the time-honored game of craps, if the gang are unwilling to trust themselves in the hands of Gov. Hendrick, Gov.
Black or Gov. Breckenridge, as the case may be.Ben Ringo, who has put up in advance $475 for a primary election nomination, with no opposition in his race for commonwealth's attorney, at Owensboro, is probably in a position to tell Jim Richardson whether or not primary elections are expensive. When the State committee meets, of which Ben is a member, he ought to be pretty well informed on the subject of $2,000 primary elections in judicial districts for four counties.The Supreme Court of Nebraska, in a test case brought by Daniel Freeman, an atheist, has forbidden the reading of the Bible or the singing of sacred songs in the public school of Nebraska. The judges hold that the Bible is sectarian and therefore its reading is unconstitutional.

THE NEW DEAL

Further Particulars of the Settlement of the Anglo-American Tobacco War—Some Opinions.The agreement entered into by the American and Imperial Tobacco Company for the settlement of the great Anglo-American Tobacco war, and the formation of the new British-American Tobacco Company, have been the absorbing topic of discussion among the trade during the past week. Just what the new deal signifies and what effect it will have on the trade seems to be a question which is variously answered and the solution is not yet apparent. Many believe that there is none beneath the surface than in sight.

THINKS AMERICAN WON.

A prominent official of the American Tobacco Company is quoted by the New York Herald as follows:
"Peace has been signed. The present news means little more than that the war which has been waged at a great cost to both sides for more than a year has been concluded, and that an agreement has been reached which means that in the near future there will be formed an international corporation, a sort of world company, the first and greatest of its kind."There has been an impression prevailing that the Americans have been worsted in their contest in England. I think that when the truth is all known it will be found that a mistake has been made.
There has been a compromise, with the advantage resting with the Americans.

MR. GALLABER'S OPINION.

Mr. Thomas Gallaber, the great tobacco manufacturer of Belfast, Ireland, was interviewed at Owensboro, Ky., a few days ago by the Owensboro Messenger, and said in part."We to the independent Leaf Tobacco dealer who tries to continue in business now. This new combination of the American Tobacco Company and the Imperial Tobacco Company of Great Britain is the greatest stroke towards the centralization of the world's tobacco interests that has ever been made. I want to assert right here it is an American victory and not a defeat. It is true that it is given out American interests will be given seats on the combined board, but that is a blind.
That company will have the Tobacco interests and crupper and J. B. Duke will be its Leading Spirit.
How could the English control the Tobacco interests? Don't the American Tobacco Company control 80 per cent. of the Cuban Tobacco interests? In this deal the American Tobacco Company gets back all the money expended in the recent fight in England and will have the controlling interest. You can't get ahead of Mr. Duke."If this combination does not mean death to the independent leaf tobacco dealer it certainly does not mean life. The independent dealers have heretofore found buyers in the Imperial companies, but they will not any more. What will they do with the stock bought by them? They will simply have to lay it away and wait until the trust gets ready to buy it. There is already a 2 1/2 years' supply of dark tobacco on hand in English warehouses, which of itself cuts out a figure in the market. My advice to the independent leaf dealer in this country is to go slow while you can."What effect will it have on the independent manufacturers? Well, sir, in the British dominion it means that the small manufacturers will just have to go out of business. I admit that they will have to do business on a smaller margin and must suffer like all the rest from the combination. You know the methods of the trust are to get the trade even though all competitors are driven out of business. Of course, all my manufactured goods are sold in the old country. There is one portion of my trade that will not be seriously affected, that is, the gold-rolled Cigarettes that we put out. I see no benefit to be derived from this combine except to the members of the corporation."

LAST OF THE BONAZA KINGS A GIANT IN INTELLECT AND FINANCE.

John W. Mackey Juggled With Millions and Because of a Quarrel Closed Down the Great Freeland Mine Which Had Yielded $3,500,000 to Him and His Associates.

The death recently of John Mackey in London, England, the last of the bonanza kings, calls to mind many interesting facts pertaining to this unique character in the history of the great west, and more especially of the development of two great gold and silver producing states, viz: Colorado and Nevada.

The story of his early experience as a prospector and the hardships and his partner endured in traveling through the then almost inaccessible mountains would add a chapter to pioneer history that would rival the stories told by our early fathers.

The discovery of the Comstock mine and its wonderful history of a production of $340,000,000 in gold and silver sounds like a fairy tale, figures almost seem to lie when one thinks of the enormous amount of money and the fabulous wealth accumulated by these men in the Comstock, of Nevada, and the Freeland and the Stanley mines, of Idaho Springs, Colorado.

John W. Mackey, R. F. McCormick, John P. Jones, U. S. Senator, Henry Rosener, Theodore M. Lillenthal, the Bank of Nevada and Stephen V. White sent Col. F. F. Obiston to Colorado on a prospecting tour. He landed in April of 1879 at Idaho Springs, where Evansville, Ind., men are now operating the Consolidated Alpine Gold and Silver mine, and immediately commenced prospecting in the territory adjacent to that little city. After considerable time and work he finally secured the Freeland and group of claims on Alps mountain about five miles from Idaho Springs. With the combined wealth of Mackey and his crowd at his back, Obiston carried on extensive development work.

The shaft was sunk to the depth of a thousand feet before a single foot of lateral drifting was done, and when he did commence to run levels he ran them thousands of feet east and west from the shaft; as a consequence enormous bodies of high grade ore was opened up and dividends were declared until they amounted to the vast sum of $3,500,000. Obiston in the meanwhile was drawing a princely salary of 25,000 a year, with subordinates drawing all the way from $10,000 down. Mackey and Rosener had a quarrel over the enormous salaries paid, the rest of the stockholders took a part in the fight and finally the property was shut down. The breach between Mackey and Rosener widened until they became bitter enemies, both plotting the financial ruin of the other.

For fifteen years as a result of senseless quarrel, the famous Freeland mine lay idle and neglected. It finally passed into the ownership of the Monarch Tunnel Co., which is now driving a cross cut tunnel from a point near Dumont, Colo., and will cut the Freeland and Alpine veins at a depth of 2500 feet, 1500 feet below the abandoned workings of the old Freeland shaft.

The Consolidated Alpine mine is situated just about a mile from John Mackey's famous old Freeland Bonanza mine. Both properties are on the same mountain and in the same geological formation. Within a radius of three and a half miles from the Alpine shaft house, over $30,000,000 has been taken from the ground. No territory of the same size in the United States, with the exception of the old Comstock, has produced so much silver and gold as has this spot of rich mineral land.

The one thing that characterizes the veins of this section is that depth has to be attained to open up the wealth of Mother Earth; but the veins are all true fissures which with depth prove to contain fabulous riches. In fact, the whole of Clear Creek country is honeycombed with veins carrying gold, silver, copper, lead and zinc. Forty years ago gold was first discovered in Colorado just about three miles from the Alpine mine. Since that time the holes in the mountains have figuratively speaking been paying teller's windows from which have run rivers of gold and silver.

Government statistics show that this section has produced to date over $200,000,000 in precious metals more than any mineral district in the United States. Cripple Creek not excepted. Clear Creek county has long ago ceased to be a place where the wild cat promontory can play his trade. Idaho Springs, the center of the district, has a Chamber of Commerce that looks into the validity of all mining companies and those who are not legitimate are quickly drummed out of camp. It can be truthfully said that Clear Creek county offers better and safer chances for mining investments than any other mineral district in the United States.

The class of men engaged in the mining business in Idaho Springs and Clear Creek county are of a kind that are not given to pipe dreams. The district is too old and well proven for that. It isn't a question any longer of prospecting in this district, it's a question of going down deep enough and of having sufficient funds behind your enterprise to ensure the proper amount of development. With the necessary finances and depth, there has never been a failure or worked out mine in Clear Creek county.

Government statistics show that over 350 mines in operation in the immediate neighborhood of Idaho Springs and of that number over 250 are shipping and producing mines. In the last sixty days the Consolidated Alpine has been added to that list and is now classified among the producing mines. With the new machine drills running they will be able to open up the ground four times as fast as has been done previously and consequently the production greatly increased.

The advance in price of Alpine stock will take place just as soon as enough stock has been sold to replace the money spent for machinery. From that time on with every hundred feet of depth gained in the development work the price of stock will be advanced.

The Alpine is a winner and is an opportunity for a safe and extremely profitable investment. The Evansville men at its head are all reputable, well known business men who have invested their own money and are only selling from the company's treasury reserve enough of the stock to help pay for the development work.

It is a good thing and will make money for all concerned.

HOMEOPATHIC M.D.'S.

In Their Second Annual Session Today.

Author of "Stringtown On The Pike," a Distinguished Visitor Present.

The West Kentucky Homeopathic Medical Association, composed of about 35 members, will hold its second annual session in this city today and tomorrow.

The association is composed of a fine body of men, some of whom have more than a State reputation.

One of the honored guests of the association will be Prof. John Uri Lloyd, author of "Stringtown on the Pike" and other popular books.

Prof. Lloyd's acceptance came too late for him to be assigned a place on the regular program.

Dr. C. P. Meredith, physician to the City Hospital, Louisville, will read a paper on Gelsemium, which is expected to be one of the interesting features.

The first session will convene at 9:30 a. m. and President C. J. Polard will deliver his annual address.

Do You Want to Yawn?

Feel cold shiverings, aching in the bones, lack of energy, headache, and great depression? These symptoms may be followed by violent headache, high fever, extreme nervousness, a condition known as malaria. Herbine cures it. Take it before the disease gets a fair hold, though it will work a cure in any stage. J. A. Hopkins, Manchester, Kan., writes: "I have used your great medicine, Herbine, for several years. There is nothing better for malaria, chills and fever, headache, biliousness and for a blood purifying tonic than Herbine as good. So at R. C. Hardwick's."

Gone to Atlanta.

Mr. Hugh Major, son of Mr. G. H. Major, of Beverly, and Mr. Steve Johnston, of Herndon, left here Sunday afternoon for Atlanta, Ga., where they will enter the Atlanta Dental College for the purpose of taking a course in dentistry.

Over-Work Weakens Your Kidneys.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

All the blood in your body passes through your kidneys once every three minutes.

The kidneys are your blood purifiers, they filter out the waste or impurities in the blood. If they are sick or out of order, they fail to do their work. Pains, aches and rheumatism come from excess of uric acid in the blood, due to neglected kidney trouble.

Kidney trouble causes quick or uneasy heart beats, and makes one feel as though they had heart trouble, because the heart is over-working in pumping thick, kidney-poisoned blood through veins and arteries.

It used to be considered that only urinary troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all constitutional diseases have their beginning in kidney trouble.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The kidneys are the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmey's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It is sold in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail. Name of Swamp-Root, free, also pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention paper when writing Dr. Kilmey & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

Of Interest to Women.

Women who have themselves suffered from the evil effects of constipation and indigestion will be interested in the following letter from father whose daughter was given up to die by two physicians:

"My daughter has suffered from indigestion for the past five years and has tried nearly everything that she could hear of for such trouble. She was confined to her bed when she began taking Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and after taking one 50 cent bottle she is able to walk a mile a time and during the day yesterday walked 3 1/2 miles. I feel like praising Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin because two doctors told me my daughter could not get well and I feel that she is on a fair road to permanent relief.—Respectfully, J. H. M. Crocker, Nixon, Tenn., Aug. 6, 1900.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is sold in fifty-cent and $1.00 bottles, under a positive guarantee, by all druggists.

NOTABLE KENTUCKIANS AT CENTURY'S DAY.

An Interesting Book Compiled By Ben La Bree Is Attracting Attention.

In "Notable Men of Kentucky at the Beginning of the Twentieth Century," Mr. Ben La Bree has given to the country a most interesting book. He has brought together in it splendid half-tone likenesses of over 900 Kentucky men who have in their respective fields or spheres earned a share of public notice by reason of their intellectual talents and business ability. The publication may be classed as purely pictorial, as the titles and explanation to each cut are not lengthy. In every instance they have been condensed to between four and seven lines.

Mr. La Bree spent eighteen months in compiling this valuable work. He thus speaks of the inspiration that made the book possible.

"Men come upon the stage of life, play their respective parts in the great drama of time and events, and then pass away. Some, by reason of the impress which they make upon those of their time and generation, live on in history, while others—the greater number—die and are forgotten. The love of posthumous fame is inherent in most men. Those who attain to distinction in life are solicitous that such distinction be transmitted as a legacy to their descendants, and to posterity outside the bonds of consanguinity. This is a noble instinct: one which prompts men to higher aims and deeds, and brings out of each his best and utmost endeavors to deserve the approbation of his fellow men. We love to contemplate the success of friends in their respective vocations, and to dwell upon their virtues after they have gone off the stage of life. In no way can we obtain such a comprehensive and pleasurable view of them, their just fame, their virtues and accomplishments as in a work like this."

The work is receiving many compliments and Mr. La Bree feels certain it will have general approval. The collection of likenesses is said to be the most comprehensive ever published outside of New York. More than 800 of the photographs were made especially for the book. The pictures have been classified into groups, affording at a glance a coterie of those who have been, or are, conspicuous in any particular vocation.

This is Mr. La Bree's seventh illustrated work. He is author of "The Pictorial Battles of the Civil War," "Camp Fires of the Confederacy," "Confederate Soldiers in the Civil War," and "Battlefield and Quarter Deck." He compiled Admiral Porter's "Naval History of the Civil War" and is editor and director of the publication of the "Historical Album Knights Templar," a story of the Triennial Campaign last August.—Courier-Journal.

END OF WORLD

Believing the prophecy of one of their number, that the world will come to an end before the month of October has passed, a band of Second Adventists, who reside in great numbers near the border of Susquehanna and Bradford counties, Penn., are now busily engaged preparing for the event.

Many farmers of this faith have turned their stock out on the hillsides, deserted their farms and homes and joined the camp of Second Adventists.

Others have refused to work or garden their crops, believing it would be wrong, in view of the world's end. Some of the Adventists spend all day at camp, pray and listening to the exhortations of their leaders, and return at night to their homes.

A few of the more sanguine believers are making robes of ascension. Other farmers, alarmed at the rapid spread of the prophecy, are endeavoring to dissuade the Adventists from the belief, but so far their efforts have met with rebukes, and in some cases the would-be pacifiers have been driven out of the camp.

THIS HORSE CAN WRITE.

Germinal, Property of a French Doctor, Prints His Master's Name on a Blackboard.

Among the domestic animals capable of training in the highest degree, none exceeds the horse in willingness. In the demonstration of this fact a French amateur equestrian has been showing off the points of his favorite saddle horse, Germinal.

Germinal is the property of Dr. M. Roubet, and among the many tricks for which the animal already has more than local celebrity Dr. Roubet prides himself upon the beast's ability to write the doctor's name in a manner to satisfy the most exacting of primary teachers.

GERMINAL'S WRITING.

Writing as an equine accomplishment has its difficulties upon the face of things, as the animal shows least design for the work. Dr. Roubet, however, has overcome the physical liabilities of the creature, and by means of a penholder of special design the horse prints the name "Roubet" in greatest ease and facility. More than this, the animal learned the trick in about 20 days.

The doctor began to teach the horse, guiding it by the reins. It was a new and wholly meaningless task for the animal, and the first results were of a nature to have discouraged any one but a horse lover and enthusiast. Gradually, however, the animal began to see design in the task to which he had been set, and as he progressed his willingness grew until with the evolved writing staff the plainest lettering was obtained.

The penholder used by the horse is a long, light staff of wood, with a roll of cloth wound around the end. This carries the pigment with which the letters are made, and in making them Germinal now does so without the least direction from his trainer.

THE EARL OF DUDLEY.
New Lord Lieutenant of Ireland Was for Years Known as King of Speedwriting.

William Humble Ward, second earl of Dudley, the new lord lieutenant of Ireland, is only 36. He inherited from his father an enormous fortune, his income being $2,000,000 a year. The young nobleman was a spendthrift and plunged madly into every extravagance. He entertained upon an amazing scale in Paris, and his life there and on the continent, his journeys to the east and his elephant hunts in India entailed enormous expenditures. Then he took up horse racing and gambling for high stakes. It was at this period that his mother, the beauenant of Ireland.)

tiful Lady Dudley, dowager countess, stepped in and, calling a family council, insisted that affairs should be so managed that the earl should receive only $50,000 a year pocket money.

He married Rachel Gurney, daughter of the London banker, in 1891, against the wishes of his family. Her mother was at one time socially intimate with the prince of Wales, but later ran a millinery establishment in London. The young earl has been parliamentary secretary to the board of trade since 1895, is mayor of Dudley and served in the Yeomanry cavalry in the Boer war.

Much Smoke, Little Fire.
A pair of enormous conical cause of much excitement in Bloomfield, N. J., the other day. During a violent storm a ball of fire was seen to descend on the roof of a fruit store and in a few moments later the rooms in the establishment were filled with smoke. Firemen were summoned to make an investigation, before an alarm was sent in. They hunted high and low but could find no fire. The smoke grew denser and finally one of the firemen found a pair of corsets that had been placed in the stovepipe for safe-keeping.

Mexican Mustang Liniment

is excellent for Rheumatism and all deep-seated pains.

For Sprains and Strains

It is useless to apply a liniment that remains on or near the surface. On the contrary, they require something that goes down into the flesh where the trouble is located. That is why is the best thing to use for Sprains and Strains. It penetrates at once to where the injury lies, drives out the inflammation and heals the wounded tissues and tendons. Don't be stingy in using the liniment nor fail to rub it in as thoroughly as the services will permit.

is a good thing to have on hand when accidents happen.

PROTRACTED MEETING

BONE FOOD

Soft and crooked bones mean bad feeding. Call the disease rickets if you want to. The growing child must eat the right food for growth. Bones must have bone food, blood must have blood food and so on through the list.

Scott's Emulsion is the right treatment for soft bones in children. Little doses every day give the stiffness and shape that healthy bones should have.

Bow legs become straighter, loose joints grow stronger and firmness comes to the soft heads.

Wrong food caused the trouble. Right food will cure it. In thousands of cases Scott's Emulsion has proven to be the right food for soft bones in childhood.

"It Goes Right to the Spot."

When pain or irritation exists on any part of the body, the application of Ballard's Snow Lotion will give prompt relief. "It goes right to the spot," said an old man who was rubbing it in, to cure his rheumatism. C. R. Smith, prop. Smith House, Canaba, Texas, writes: "I have used Ballard's Snow Lotion in my family for several years and have found it to be a fine remedy for all aches and pains, and I recommend it for pains in the throat and chest." 25c at R.
